Krieger discusses GLP-1 medications and their role in treating obesity

Perry's Rotary Club had the regular luncheon meeting on Monday, November 2, 2026 at Perry Golf & Country Club. Rotarian Laura Vollmer called the meeting to order beginning with the Pledge of Allegiance followed by a prayer by Rotarian Reverend Doctor Joshua Bell, then in unison the group sang the first verse of America.

November Junior Rotarian Gunnar Farrar gave the student announcements for the week.

Students taking tests this week should arrive with their laptops fully charged, as limited electrical outlets will be available and ACT seating requirements prevent students from moving to find an outlet. Students should also check their email for information regarding meals during testing.

Butter Braid Pickup is scheduled for Wednesday, November 4, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. in the boardroom at the former junior high building. Families are reminded to make pickup arrangements and avoid parking in the bus lane until all buses have departed.

Perry cheerleaders will hold a Cheer Showing Tuesday, November 3, at 6:30 p.m. in the Upper Elementary Gym. The team will compete in Game Day Cheer Regionals Saturday, November 7, in Stroud, with Perry scheduled to perform at 1:25 p.m.

Halloween costumes will not be permitted at school on Thursday or Friday. However, Fellowship of Christian Athletes (FCA) will host a Costume Contest Friday, November 6, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in the Lower Elementary Gym. Students in grades 7–12 are invited to participate and show off their favorite costumes.

Junior Rotarians Bailley Koch and Lily Mathiesen were not present.

Stacey Wilda introduced Colleen Krieger, PA-C, as the guest speaker where she discussed GLP-1 medications, their growing use in treating obesity and diabetes, and the challenges patients face in obtaining treatment.

Krieger earned a degree in dental hygiene from Wichita State University in 2002 and worked as a dental hygienist before completing the physician assistant program at the University of Oklahoma in 2015. She joined Family Physicians in 2018 and works in the emergency department at Blackwell Regional Hospital. Although she originally planned to return to Kansas after graduating, she said her experiences in Oklahoma and the relationships she developed led her family to settle in the area. She expressed her appreciation for the Perry community and the opportunity to care for patients throughout the region.

Krieger explained that GLP-1 medications have been available for years, initially being used primarily to treat diabetes. During the past five years, their use for weight management has grown considerably as medical professionals have gained a better understanding of obesity and its effects on overall health.

She emphasized that obesity is more complicated than simply eating less and exercising more. Genetics, metabolism and other factors can influence a person's ability to lose weight and maintain that loss. For years, people struggling with obesity often faced stigma and were told their weight was solely a matter of personal choices. Krieger said medical professionals are increasingly recognizing the complexity of the condition and the need for effective treatment options.

GLP-1 medications work in several ways, including helping regulate blood sugar, slowing digestion and increasing feelings of fullness. They can also reduce food cravings, which may help patients who struggle with persistent thoughts about food or eating in response to stress and other emotions rather than hunger.

Krieger noted that patients often notice they feel full longer after eating. However, this effect can also cause side effects, including nausea and stomach discomfort, particularly when patients eat more than their bodies can comfortably tolerate. She stressed the importance of understanding how the medications work and following appropriate medical guidance throughout treatment.

While many patients experience significant weight loss, Krieger cautioned that medication alone does not replace healthy habits. Proper nutrition becomes especially important when people eat less, because they must ensure their bodies still receive the nutrients needed to remain healthy. Adequate protein intake and regular exercise are essential to help preserve muscle mass during weight loss.

She explained that patients who lose weight too quickly or fail to eat properly may experience muscle loss, hair loss and other nutritional problems. Setting realistic weight-loss goals is equally important. Krieger said some patients become so encouraged by their progress that they continue pursuing lower numbers on the scale even after reaching a healthy weight for their individual needs. She emphasized that the goal should be improved health and well-being rather than simply achieving a particular number.

Maintaining weight loss can also be challenging. Krieger explained that patients may experience renewed cravings or weight regain if they discontinue medication, making long-term planning and healthy routines important parts of treatment. She encouraged patients to work closely with their healthcare providers to establish appropriate goals, monitor their progress and address nutritional needs.

Krieger also discussed the cost of GLP-1 medications, and the difficulties patients encounter when seeking insurance coverage. She expressed frustration that some insurance plans may cover certain surgical weight-loss procedures while declining to cover medications that could help patients manage obesity and reduce their risk of other health problems. The high cost of treatment can place these medications out of reach for many people who might benefit from them.

She described the growing amount of time healthcare providers spend navigating insurance requirements, prior authorizations and alternative treatment programs. While some programs offer patients access to medication along with health coaching and guidance on nutrition and exercise, the additional requirements can be frustrating for patients and providers alike.

Despite these challenges, Krieger said GLP-1 medications have made a meaningful difference for many patients. She has seen people become more active, make healthier food choices and experience fewer cravings as they progress through treatment. She acknowledged that the medications do not work equally well for everyone, and continued research into new treatment options may offer additional possibilities for those who have not responded to existing medications.

Krieger encouraged everyone to remember that successful weight management involves more than medication alone. A balanced approach that includes appropriate medical care, nutritious food, adequate protein, exercise and realistic expectations can help patients work toward lasting improvements in their health.

The group then recited the 4-Way Test, and the meeting was adjourned.
