GROVE WOMAN PLEADS GUILTY TO DRUG CHARGES

Sheila Stogsdill
Contributor

A Grove woman charged with drug-related offenses pleaded guilty and received a five-year deferred sentence.

Mahaganoy Renee Moore, 29, must serve 90 days in the Craig County jail, but she received credit for time served since Aug. 19, court records show.

During the traffic stop, Moore admitted to having "some coke" in the vehicle's center console, and it would be around 3.5 grams. However, when weighed and tested, the drug was fentanyl and weighed 7.4 grams, an arrest affidavit states.

The affidavit states that officers found a clear plastic twist-off baggie with a white powder substance and a small cut straw in the center console.

Drummond claims win in major ruling in Winter Storm Uri case

Oklahoma Attorney General Gentner Drummond announced "a major victory" in his lawsuit against NextEra Energy Marketing, after an Osage County judge ruling that the company violated Oklahoma law by charging excessive prices for natural gas during Winter Storm Uri.

The court granted Drummond's motion for partial summary judgment and found NextEra liable under both the Oklahoma Emergency Price Stabilization Act and the Oklahoma Consumer Protection Act. The amount of damages, including overcharges, restitution, and disgorgement, will be determined at trial.

"This ruling marks an important victory in our fight to hold NextEra accountable for the staggering prices Oklahomans were forced to pay during Winter Storm Uri," Drummond said. "My office will continue fighting to ensure NextEra answers for the harm it caused and to recover every dollar possible for the Oklahomans exploited during the emergency."

The ruling comes days after the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission dismissed a petition from NextEra seeking federal jurisdiction over issues raised in Drummond's lawsuit. The Sept. 23 dismissal allowed the litigation to continue in Oklahoma state court.

Drummond has filed several lawsuits against energy marketers alleging they artificially inflated natural gas prices during Winter Storm Uri in February 2021. The lawsuits have been consolidated.

Grove man receives 20 year-sentence for producing child sexual abuse material

Sheila Stogsdill
