Learning skills that go beyond the classroom

Covington-Douglas seventh-grade students are getting a hands-on introduction to real-world skills through the Technical Applications Program (TAP), taught by Mr. Thompson, TAP Director/Instructor from Autry Technology Center.

Mr. Thompson comes to CD each day to work with students, providing practical learning experiences designed to introduce them to career pathways, workforce opportunities and skills they can use in everyday life.

This week, students tackled an important practical skill—how to change a tire. The hands-on lesson gave students an opportunity to learn by doing while gaining experience with a task they may encounter long after they leave the classroom.

Through TAP, Covington-Douglas students are building confidence and learning valuable skills that can prepare them for future careers and life beyond school.

Covington-Douglas seventh-grade students learn how to safely change a tire during a hands-on lesson through the Technical Applications Program.
