NYC ushers in new era

The year 2026 is going to be a year of big news, big controversies, and big changes in America.

New Year’s Day ushered in America’s 2026 year of mid-term elections in state and national politics. Up for grabs are not just state governorships and state congressional balances but also control of house and senate power in Washington, D.C. and how the last two years of President Trump’s presidency will play out.

It is tricky to write about these things in a nonpartisan way. If you are like me, you interpret what you read through the prism of your own interpretations. I am reminded of my homiletics professor in seminary saying to us, “Every time you preach, you are preaching as many sermons as there are listeners because everyone listens through their own experience and interpretation of what you are saying.”

My intent, when I write a political column like this one, is to simply acknowledge factually what is going on in the world and leave my bias out of it.

On New Year’s Day, with millions of Americans I watched the historic inaugural ceremony of New York City’s new mayor Zohran Mamdani’s swearing in, with his hand on the Quran.

The quality of every speaker’s speech was excellent in rhetorical delivery. New Yorkers living in poverty, ruled by the super-rich living in luxury was a recurring theme. All the speeches that day found me in Christian agreement with the sentiment of inclusiveness as it relates the God-given value of every person, no matter who, what they believe, where they come from, their race, or nationality. This is the stuff of New Testament missionaries and world evangelism.

The mayor spoke with joyful eloquence and confidence about a new socialist city government uplifting everyone left behind in an old system of extravagant wealth for the privileged few and dismal poverty for people working to keep New York City running. His speech brought repeated cheers and applause from the audience who voted for this historic change.

Here are excerpts from Mayor Mamdani’s inaugural speech.

“Beginning today, we will govern expansively and audaciously. We may not always succeed. But never will we be accused of lacking the courage to try.

“To those who insist that the era of big government is over, hear me when I say this: no longer will City Hall hesitate to use its power to improve New Yorkers’ lives...

“No longer will City Hall hesitate to use its power to improve New Yorkers’ lives .... We will replace the frigidity of rugged individualism with the warmth of collectivism.

“Here is what I want you to expect from the administration that this morning moved into the building behind me. We will transform the culture of City Hall from one of “no” to one of “how?” We will answer to all New Yorkers, not to any billionaire or oligarch who thinks they can buy our democracy.

“We will govern without shame and insecurity, making no apology for what we believe. I was elected as a democratic socialist and I will govern as a democratic socialist. I will not abandon my principles for fear of being deemed radical.”

“What we achieve together will reach across the five boroughs and it will resonate far beyond. There are many who will be watching. They want to know if the left can govern. They want to know if the struggles that afflict them can be solved. They want to know if it is right to hope again.

“So, standing together with the wind of purpose at our backs, we will do something that New Yorkers do better than anyone else: We will set an example for the world. If what Sinatra said is true, let us prove that anyone can make it in New York — and anywhere else too. Let us prove that when a city belongs to the people, there is no need too small to be met, no person too sick to be made healthy, no one too alone to feel like New York is their home. The work continues, the work endures, the work, my friends, has only just begun. Thank you.”

The most important take-away for me is the historic change from capitalism to socialism in the words, “No longer will City Hall hesitate to use its power to improve New Yorkers’ lives .... We will replace the frigidity of rugged individualism with the warmth of collectivism.

From pilgrims to revolutionaries, from pioneers to astronauts America has been built on rugged individualism. And now to the applause of New York voters, socialism has its opportunity to prove there is a better future America to be built on socialistic collectivism replacing less government and meritocrat rewards of free enterprise.

Justice department announces Operation Relentless results

The Department of Justice announced the results of Operation Relentless Justice, a coordinated enforcement effort to identify, track, and arrest child sex predators. The nationwide crackdown resulted in over 205 child victims being located and the arrests of over 293 child sexual abuse offenders. The coordinated effort was executed over the course of two weeks by all 56 FBI field offices, the Child Exploitation and Obscenity Section (CEOS) in the Department’s Criminal Division, and U.S. Attorneys’ offices around the country.

“We will not allow evil criminals who prey on children to evade justice,” said Attorney General Pamela Bondi.

“Our federal agents have worked tirelessly alongside our state and local partners to track down these vile predators, and now our prosecutors will ensure they receive severe punishments to match their horrific crimes.”

Corporation commission terminates administrative director

Tres Savage
Nondoc.com

After more than three hours of discussion in executive session, the Oklahoma Corporation Commission unanimously voted Tuesday to terminate the employment of the regulatory agency’s administrative director, Brandy Wreath, with a “confidential” severance agreement and no public explanation.

“I have no comment at this time,” Chairwoman Kim David said after the meeting.

Commissioner Brian Bingman offered a similar “no comment,” shrugging his shoulders while exiting the underground tunnel below the Will Rogers Memorial Building. David repeated the phrase when asked what the public should make of the commissioners’ decision and subsequent silence.

Commissioner Todd Hiett found a few words to say.

“Tough day,” Hiett said. “The vote speaks for itself.”

Asked if Wreath had been told what precipitated his termination, Hiett responded: “You’d have to ask him if he knows.”

As the three statewide officials tasked with regulating petroleum exploration, public utilities and other industries hurried out of the building, Wreath stayed behind in the auditorium where dozens of OCC employees had camped out all afternoon.

“I’ll say the inside part out loud,” one woman told Wreath. “It’s bullshit.”

Others were in tears and shocked, saying they had no idea their director’s job was in jeopardy until Tuesday’s meeting agenda was posted Monday.

“I prayed for you all night,” another woman said.

Wreath hugged her and tried to reassure his former coworkers.

“It’s OK. It’s OK. No fear,” he said. “I’ve already documented things with really important people to make sure.”

At one point, Wreath and a pair of employees noted the irony that the day’s grave decision coincided with the arrival of new signs for the parking lot.

“I saw that when I pulled in today. I nearly wept from that,” Wreath said. “You finally have handicap parking.”

Asked what the three commissioners told him about the situation when he briefly joined their executive session, Wreath replied, “They didn’t say anything.”

“They just said that I could resign or they would terminate me, and either way, there was the severance package that they’d do on the separation. And I said, ‘I will not willingly leave my people.’ I’ve worked too hard to be here for them, and I, you know — what’s the termination going to do to me that hadn’t already been done by the years?”

Wreath, who joined the agency in 2006, served as director of its Public Utility Division before being promoted to director of administration in June 2022. Since then, he said the commissioners had never reviewed his employment before.

“The way I’ve always operated, and I’ve said it to them many times, if there’s anything you ever need from me that you’re not getting, all you’ve got to do is ask,” Wreath said. “And I respect these three (commissioners). There’s nothing that they would need for me, as long as it’s not illegal, immoral or —”

The 10 or so employees surrounding Wreath said in unison,

“Unethical!”

“— I would do it for them,” Wreath said.

Wreath: ‘What we do is not popular’

Minutes before Tuesday afternoon’s meeting began, Wreath sat by himself on the front corner of the underground auditorium’s theater rows. Slowly, groups of OCC employees rose from the rear of the auditorium and assembled behind him.

“Is this the friends and family row?” one woman joked.

Wreath blushed and grew emotional.

“I love you guys,” he said.

When David, Hiett and Bingman entered the room, the four-dozen OCC employees and other observers stood. In less than a minute, the trio voted to enter executive session to review Wreath’s employment — the only substantive item on the regulatory body’s final meeting agenda of 2025.

“So, how was everybody’s Christmas?” Wreath eventually asked to break the ice among his somberly assembled coworkers.

“Anybody have good new year’s plans? I don’t have anything to do.”

A noted Batman enthusiast who was approaching his 20-year anniversary with the Corporation Commission next year, Wreath witnessed a variety of controversies, including the securitization of 2021 Winter Storm Uri debt that remains in litigation before the Oklahoma Supreme Court. He also repeatedly drew the ire of former Commissioner Bob Anthony, who criticized administrative pay decisions under Wreath in a November 2024 dissenting opinion that alleged “a possible OCC coverup of Commissioner Hiett’s misconduct.”
