Rogers County offers fun Fall traditions

ROGERS COUNTY, Okla., — From spooky ghost hunts to family festivals and cozy fall traditions, Rogers County is bursting with autumn adventures this October.

Whether you're picking the perfect pumpkin in Claremore, competing in a costume contest in Catoosa or trick-or-treating in Oologah, there's something for everyone to enjoy. Celebrate the season with plenty of frightful fun and family-friendly festivities throughout Rogers County.

Experience some of the best parts of fall during the Pumpkin Festival at Shepherd's Cross in Claremore. The authentic working farm welcomes visitors with truckloads of pumpkins in every shape and size while transforming into an autumn destination for its annual festival.

Open Tuesday through Saturday, the festival offers a hay maze, scarecrow making, hayrides, a petting zoo, games and activities for the whole family. Visitors can also purchase pumpkins, straw bales, corn stalks and other seasonal favorites to bring a touch of the farm home. Shepherd's Cross will also be open Monday, October 26.

Those looking for a spookier way to celebrate the season can work up their courage for a Paranormal Investigation at the Belvidere Mansion in Claremore. A fixture of the local landscape dating to Oklahoma statehood in 1907, the Victorian-style mansion known as the "Belle of Rogers County" has been the subject of stories of unexplained activity for decades. Join the Rogers County Historical Society for an investigation of the historic mansion during this one-of-a-kind spooky experience.

Families can don their costumes and head to Catoosa's Hometown Halloween for an evening of festive fun. Held from 5:30-8 p.m., the free community celebration features inflatables, games, a costume contest, pony rides, train rides and the popular Redneck Theatre.

Halloween fun continues in downtown Oologah with Boologah, where local organizations and businesses line the streets to hand out candy and celebrate the spooky season. Games, food trucks, costume prizes and more make Boologah a fun and family-friendly way to celebrate Halloween in Rogers County.

From afternoons on the farm to evenings filled with costumes, candy and even a few ghosts, October offers plenty of ways to make memories throughout Rogers County.
